WELCOME TO WKND

TINA CHADHA, FEATURES EDITOR

Is it Fri-yay yet? OK, we know your weekend really starts on Thursdays. To help you make the most of your down time, each week our Thursday edition will be your personal guide to the best Boston has to offer, from the coolest events to the tastiest eats. The fun starts now.

SEE WHAT THE BUZZ IS ABOUT AT CANNACON

The road to recreational marijuana legalization hasn't been easy for pro-pot advocates in Boston. While Massachusetts legislators are still figuring how to implement the seemingly ever-changing new weed laws, that hasn't stopped local supporters and entrepreneurs from exploring the booming business side of cannabis. Thousands are expected to attend this weekend's CannaCon, the first of its kind in the city. For more, see page 6.

BOSTON AND JOAN JETT SHOW YOU HOW TO PARTY

Who said rock 'n' roll was dead? Led by guitarist Tom Scholz, local rock heroes Boston will team up with the Godmother of Punk, Joan Jett, and her Blackhearts band at the TD Garden on Thursday night. Expect a fun night of jamming from these rock legends during the The North American "Hyper Space" tour. For more, see pages 10-11.

FEAST LIKE THE FRENCH ON BASTILLE DAY

Bastille Day means you get to let your Francophile flag fly. On Friday, sip Champagne cocktails and enjoy a four-course family-style meal at Menton in the Seaport, or try the Marie Antoinette-inspired strawberry dacquoise for two at Bar Boulud in the Back Bay. The later will join a slew of other local French restaurants at the French Cultural Center's 42nd annual Bastille Day street party on Marlborough Street this weekend. For more, see page 4.

'KEY & PEELE' STAR TALKS FILMING IN CAMBRIDGE

Keegan-Michael Key is back bringing the laughs on the small screen with his upcoming Netflix series, "Key & Peele." The "Key & Peele" alum plays a Harvard-educated author who's once again causing trouble with his old Ivy League pals on the new show. The comedian and actor says, "Cambridge is kind of a magical place." For more, see pages 8-9.

GET READY FOR 'GAME OF THRONES'

We know you can't wait to head back to Westeros with Jon Snow, Cersei and the rest of the "Game of Thrones" gang. HBO's award-winning fantasy drama returns for its seventh season this weekend, which means it's time to clear all your Sunday night plans. Prepare for the new season in style with a "GOT"-themed brunch at Boston's Gather. For more, see page 7.

Celebrate Bastille Day on this side of the Atlantic

You don't have to fly to France to party like a Parisian.

Get hyped for the French Cultural Center's biggest fête of the year, the July 14 celebration of Bastille Day, France's equivalent to the American Fourth of July. The 42nd annual Bastille Day celebration is a French-style block party, complete with food, drinks, two live music acts and an expected 2,000 attendees. Marlborough Street will be blocked off between Berkeley and Clarendon streets in Boston's Back Bay to accommodate the fun.

Bostonians may know the celebration as one of the summer's biggest parties, but the event is just as much a celebration of the beginnings of French democracy, according to French Cultural Center Executive Director Barbara Bouquegneau.

"France is where all those humanitarian ideas were generated from, all our great philosophers, what we call the 'Lumières,'" she says. "On top of the celebration of July 14, which was the actual day the Bastille jail was raided, it has evolved for us into a celebration of our real values: liberty, equality, fraternity."

Bastille Day commemorates the storming of the Bastille during the French Revolution, when the people rose up against the monarchy. Boston's 2017 celebration seeks to capture that same spirit and energy.

In partnership with World Music/CRASHarts, the event will feature two well-known French musicians, Daby Touré and Ben l'Oncle Soul. Touré is known for combining the musical styles of multiple countries and has performed with Peter Dinklage, Rihanna and Bob Geldof. Ben l'Oncle Soul has appeared on the French top album charts and plays a unique blend of pop, hip-hop, reggae and R&B, among other genres.

Guests will not only hear French culture at the celebration, they'll be able to taste it too. Eight area restaurants will sell food and drinks, including Bar Boulud, Bastille Kitchen, La Voile Newbury Street, La Voile Brookline, Mister Crepe, Waffle Cabin, Teranga and Wilson Farm.

"We used to joke that this is the only block party where you can freely drink alcohol without the brown paper bag," Bouquegneau says of the event's ample adult beverage opportunities.

However, the celebration is still family-friendly. From 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., there will be a children's corner offering crafts and face-painting. Additionally, a VIP reception will be held in the French Cultural Center's garden, complete with an open bar, hors d'oeuvres, desserts and free access to the street festival.

Ultimately, organizers hope to use the event as a means to celebrate French culture and Franco-American relations.

"It's about promoting good cultural relations between the United States and France," says Jessica Nussenbaum, cultural programs manager. "It started just to celebrate these values."

Bouquegneau notes that many Francophone communities are well-represented in Boston, and the French influence on the city is on public display.

"If you take a historical tour and look at monuments, you see so many streets with French names," she says. "It's ever-present in Boston in remembrance of all the historical contributions that are French."

The festivities will include a VIP reception. PROVIDED

Learn about the weed business
at CannaCon. ISTOCK

Marijuana is big business at Boston's inaugural CannaCon

It's going to be a blowout. HENRY JANI

After recreational marijuana possession and use was legalized last December, people have been able to blaze freely and grow small amounts of their own ganja as well. Legislation on retail cannabis sale, however, does not project licensed dispensary openings until at least July 2018. But as they say, the early bird gets the worm. Or perhaps, the early wake and baker.

CannaCon Boston is the "nation's largest business to business cannabis trade show," according to partner and general manager Dave Mesford. So, putting all the marijuana puns aside, this expo event focuses on the myriad of economic opportunities within emerging cannabis markets like Massachusetts and New England.

"We focus heavily on education and all things business," says Mesford. "The interesting thing about this industry is that much of it is several times removed from the actual cannabis."

For example, consider packaging. The product, especially now post-legalization and regulated, must be provided in standardized containers — a huge economic endeavor that focuses completely on plastic capsules. "Then you have ideas like child safety, labelling, and automation," adds Mesford. And this is just one example of how huge amounts of money circulate in this industry before a consumer even has a chance to pack a bowl or roll a joint.

However, that's not to say that consumers aren't encouraged to attend CannaCon. "Anybody endeavoring to enter into the Massachusetts cannabis market has so much to learn here," says Mesford.

Speakers will address topics covering home cultivation to overcoming misinformation and championing marijuana's medicinal properties. One lecture will feature the "Travelling Hemp Museum" and free, take-home hemp samples.

Those interested in entrepreneurial tips can attend the CannaCon Pre-Conference Workshop hosted by Clover Leaf University. A nationally accredited institution, Clover Leaf will offer a comprehensive guide to starting up a cannabis company with information on business models and legislative restrictions. "They'll run through every aspect of running a business, for cannabis and even other realms," explains Mesford. A "Shark Tank"-style investor pitch session called "InCannaVest" will also be going on for those who think they have the next-best marijuana product or service.

According to organizers, 5,000 to 10,000 people are expected to be in attendance throughout the weekend.

"Anyone wanting to get into the industry should come, regardless of where the administration goes," suggests Mesford. "It's not scary — come down and watch people do business."

Celebrate season 7 of "Game of Thrones" with brunch

Get ready for the show's return with Gather.

Before you settle in for a night of dragons, White Walkers and epic sword battles, fuel up with a Hodor-sized feast at these "Game of Thrones" brunches in Boston.

In celebration of the hit HBO drama's season seven premiere July 16, Gather will host a pair of brunches this weekend in honor of the show's return. The restaurant, located at District Hall in the Seaport, will serve up "Game of Thrones"-themed treats from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, July 15 and 16.

While the menu is still being finalized, expect food and drink specials worthy of a Dothraki war lord. One brunch dish that's set to make the list includes slab bacon and biscuits with sausage gravy and cheese grits. Gather recently asked its fans to name the hearty meal in a social-media contest, with the winner receiving a gift card to the restaurant.

Although Arya Stark, aka actress Maisie Williams, has been checking pretty busy filming her role in the upcoming "X-Men" spin-off flick "The New Mutants."

In addition to the food and drinks, Gather will also have special "Game of Thrones"-inspired activities for guests to take part in. Inside seating for the brunches is limited, though, so make sure to reserve your spot ahead of time. Patio seating will be available as well, but only on a first come, first served basis if the weather holds up.

Keegan-Michael Key: Obama's anger translator, Luther, wouldn't survive Trump's presidency

The "Key & Peele" star opens up about the right to strike and his new Netflix series "Friends From College." MATT JULI

Things get complicated for Keegan-Michael Key in "Friends From College." BARBARA NITKE / NETFLIX

The gang's all here. DAVID LEE / NETFLIX

Life after graduation gets messy for Keegan-Michael Key and the cast of Netflix's new comedy "Friends From College."

The "Key & Peele" star plays a Harvard-educated author named Ethan who's struggling to keep his career and marriage together after moving back to New York City with his wife, Lisa, played by Cobie Smulders. While the couple finds some comfort being surrounded by their old pals again, things get complicated thanks to Ethan's affair with their mutual friend Sam (Annie Parisse).

"They're trying so hard to stop, [but] they have this kind of animal magnetism to each other," says the 46-year-old actor. Here's what else Key had to say about the show, filming in Cambridge and more.

Did you and your actual college friends have any weird rituals or games like Ethan and his pals? We would go places and then pretend to speak in a foreign language.

We'd make up a foreign language and we would speak in a foreign language that sounded like, I guess Czechoslovakian, something kind of Eastern European.

We would just try to see if we could make people at restaurants murmur about us. Like, "That guy's black and that girl's white. They're speaking a different language. Are they from the Netherlands? Where are they from?" You wanted to see if you could make other people talk about you. That's what theater nerds do when they go to college.

You filmed a few scenes at Harvard. How'd you like Cambridge?

I think Cambridge is kind of a magical place. It's one of those places I've always wanted to visit. When you want to visit Rome, or the Leaning Tower of Pisa, the London Bridge, going to the Louvre to see the Mona Lisa — Cambridge is one of those places.

To be there in the fall and to be able to experience it, it feels more collegiate than any other college I've ever been to. You think of Harvard as this bucolic, collegiate place, but actually, Cambridge isn't that far from Boston. It's still a city vibe, which I wasn't expecting as much, which is pretty cool.

Why did you support the Harvard cafeteria workers' strike during your visit?
I'm from Detroit, so I'm from a working class town with a lot of union and labor ties. There aren't many things that are more American than the ability and the right to strike for a fair wage, for you to be compensated for the work that you do. It's something that sits deep in my heart. My whole life, I've been surrounded by United Auto workers, AFL-CIO and I'm a proud member of the Screen Actors Guild and Actors' Equity, so as a person who gets my health care through my union and stuff like that, it's an idea that can become quickly present in my mind. That's why I thought it was the appropriate thing to do to support them.

How mad is Obama's anger translator at the Trump administration?
Oh, Luther had a heart attack about four weeks ago. No, Luther is in critical condition in the hospital with tubes coming out of his body. Actually, Luther's body was found on the street the other day in a bloody mess. His head was found completely exploded about seven blocks away. Luther would not have been able to handle this. Thank God the president's retired.

Hyper Space Tour: Boston With Joan Jett and the Blackhearts

This classic-rock bill is a perfect illustration of '70s and early '80s rock extremes. On one end there's the grandiose, note-perfect and borderline symphonic power pop of local heroes Boston. On the other, there's the no-nonsense, leather-clad dive-bar snarl of opener Joan Jett. Arguably, the two tendencies would fuse into hair metal, but that's for another tour. Nobody likes a crowded beach. GETTY IMAGES

Best beaches near Boston to beat the crowds

Massachusetts' hidden beaches, revealed. ERIN TIERNAN

Nothing says summer like heading to the beach and dipping your toes in the sand, but sometimes the crowds at beaches near Boston can be anything but relaxing.

Here's a roundup of our favorite secret beaches sure to help you ditch the crowds this summer.

Bound Brook Island Beach — Wellfleet

This is the kind of place the locals like to keep all to themselves.

Situated at the end of a mile-long narrow dirt road, you'll find a small parking lot that holds fewer than a dozen cars. Climb uphill about 200 yards and you've made it to the Bound Brook Island Beach.

Truly a rarity on Cape Cod, other beachgoers will be few and far between on this remote beach. It's about a two-hour drive from Boston, but you'll save tons of time if you hop on the Provincetown ferry instead.

Beach at Houghton's

Pond — Milton

Who said you needed to head to the coast to find a great beach? Probably your inner New Englander, but fear not, Houghton's Pond offers sandy beaches and clear (fresh) waters a mere 15 miles from downtown Boston. This family-friendly swimming hole comes equipped with lifeguards, changing areas and ample parking, which we know is a big deal for you Bostonians. And did we mention it's free?

It's about a 30-minute drive from Boston, depending on traffic.

Wingaersheek Beach — Gloucester

If you're looking for your little slice of the tropics in Massachusetts, Wingaersheek is the beach for you.

Framed by large flat rocks and with incredibly warm, almost crystal-clear waters, heading to Wingaersheek Beach is like stepping through a portal into the tropics.

Just remember, there aren't any public restrooms here. You might find a port-a-potty, but just be prepared.

It's about a 45-minute drive from Boston.

Wessagusset Beach — Weymouth

A hidden gem in Weymouth, just south of Boston lies Wessagusset Beach. While you won't find much in the way of amenities here, that also means you won't be running into too many people on your coastal retreat. Wessagusset Beach is best at low tide and boasts beautiful sunset views.

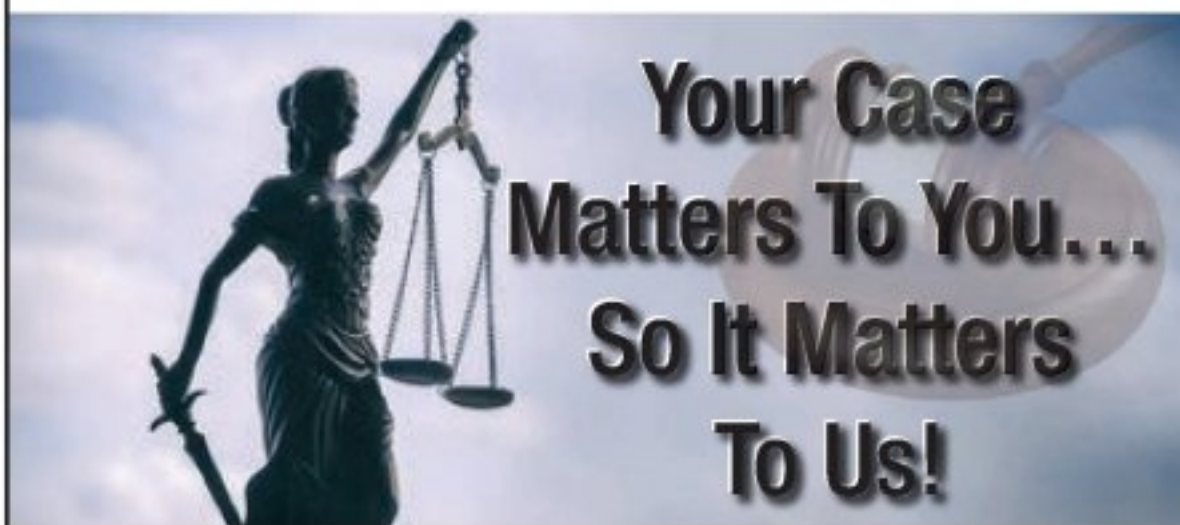

It's about a 30-minute drive from downtown.

Yirrell Beach — Winthrop

If you don't mind a few meandering planes flying overhead, Yirrell Beach is a great, local option to go stick your toes in the sand. Situated just before Deer Island, the area boasts a relatively expansive and sandy beach a mere eight miles from downtown.

It will take about 20 minutes to drive there.

Caesar (Andy Serkis) hates the future in "War for the Planet of the Apes"
ALL PHOTOS TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX

"War for the Planet of the Apes"

Director: Matt Reeves
Stars: Andy Serkis, Woody Harrelson

● ● ● ○ ○

The original "Planet of the Apes" movies were meant for kids, but they weren't dumb. They were arguably the most political and radical Hollywood product of the era, steeped in Civil Rights lingo and imagery. The fourth one, "Conquest," even ended with what was effectively a slave revolt. Amazingly, the rebooted series isn't as ostentatiously woke. These films are dour and serious and long, but not even the new "War for the Planet of the Apes" speaks directly to our times the way the originals threw in nods to Vietnam and Malcolm X. Then again, it's very 2017 in one way: This is a franchise in which humans are so belligerent and dumb the whole species might as well eat it.

When last we left the new "Apes" saga, human-smart ape relations had escalated. It's even worse by the time "War" picks up. Apart from a mysteriously mute little girl (Amiah Miller), there are no token nice humans. Nearly the only homo sapiens we see are soldiers, led by Woody Harrelson's "Colonel." He knows humans, plagued with a now-mutating virus, are on the way out, and he'll be damned if some damn dirty apes are going to take our place. He tries to kill the chimp who started the revolution, Andy Serkis' mo-capped Caesar. Instead, he kills his wife and son by accident.

Title aside, there's very little war in "War." After a grimy battle opener, it segues into a dirty revenge Western, only to settle into a POW-camp drama. The normally focused Caesar loses himself to imploding grief, abandoning his tribe for a mission to find and execute the Colonel with extreme prejudice. There's a fair amount of "Apocalypse Now" running through "War," including with the Colonel, who's basically Kurtz, only less charming. But these aren't empty fanboyish shout-outs, as in another recent simian-led blockbuster, "Kong: Skull Island." That film openly quoted famous shots; returning series director Matt Reeves, who also helmed "Dawn," doesn't do that. He's simply made a film that wants to be taken as seriously as the Coppola classic.

Still, "Apocalypse Now" is definitely more fun. "War" is about as heavy as "Dawn." Even the monkey mayhem is po-faced. The ultra-mega-seriousness isn't always matched by the writing; most of the characters are thin, even poor Caesar, whose need for vengeance eventually feels like a way to simply keep the plot going, not something dark bubbling beneath him. Still, it gets an A for effort, and far as this year's downer-franchise entries go, it's far less smug and more deeply-felt than "Logan" — even if some of us may pine for the days when films about revolutionary apes were fun as well as harrowing. MATT PRIGGE

Woody Harrelson (with gorilla) plays the baddest of the humans.

Nurses at Tufts Medical Center on strike

More than 1,000 nurses began picketing outside the main entrance of Tufts Medical Center Wednesday morning, kicking off the first strike at a major Boston hospital in about 30 years.

The strike began after a last-ditch effort at negotiations on Tuesday failed to find agreement between Tufts Medical Center and the Massachusetts Nurses Association, the union representing the nurses.

The union is seeking better staffing "to ensure nurses have more time to spend with their patients," a competitive salary and to enhance their pension benefit.

The union argues that Tufts nurses are the lowest paid in the city and have the worst pension benefits in Boston.

The strike began Wednesday at 7 a.m. and is intended to go until 6:59 a.m. on Thursday, making it a one-day strike, the union said.

Nurses and supporters stand on the picket line at the nurses' strike at Tufts Medical Center in Boston's Chinatown. @MASSNURSES/TWITTER

However, Tufts will reportedly bar the nurses from returning to work for an additional four days. The medical center — which has seen multiple financial losses in recent fiscal years — said that it has more than 320 experienced nurses coming in during the strike.

"We will deliver the same exceptional care during the MNA strike that we always have at Tufts MC. #WeArePrepared," a tweet from the hospital's account stated.

In a statement, a representative said that "The MNA had an opportunity to reach an agreement tonight; they instead chose to strike and have our nurses walk out on patients."

"We went to the table today and offered a path forward that met the needs of our nurses," the statement continued. "The union recycled their retirement proposal that is risky for nurses and expensive for the hospital."

MBTA to share rider etiquette reminders through the use of GIFs

In a digital world where everyone on the T is probably consumed by their cellphone for their entire trip, how will riders be reminded not to wear bulky backpacks on the train or to give up their seat to someone who needs it?

Through GIFs, of course.

The MBTA and its advertising partner, Outfront Media, teamed up with Giphy to launch a campaign to bring riders public service announcements through the easy-to-understand, animated world of GIFs.

The PSAs use Giphy, a GIF search engine, to integrate the GIFs into ON Smart Liveboards, which are digital panels that can display videos and are positioned throughout Boston transit stations.

"We're thrilled that our platform is empowering the MBTA and Giphy to distribute GIF-based content in a new context," said Andy Sriubas of Outfront Media in a state-

Screens on MBTA platforms will show GIFs to remind commuters of rider etiquette, like standing aside to let others off a car first. PROVIDED BY OUTFRONT MEDIA ment. "We hope MBTA riders will appreciate the fun, lighthearted way that we are sharing these messages."

These messages will focus mostly on reminders about rider etiquette and safety awareness. In one PSA, the screen plays a GIF of a dog crossing a street while wearing a backpack full of puppies.

"Remove your backpack," the screen says above the GIF. Below, "Backpacks take up space and hit people — please take them off when riding the train"

Another announcement addresses the issue colloquially known as "manspreading," when a rider (usually male) spreads his legs widely while sitting, thus taking up someone else's space.

The GIF for that one? A (perhaps overweight) cat belly-up on a chair, its rear legs spread wide.

"Only take the seats you need," the screen reads.

Yet another reminder urges commuters on the platform to "Stand aside for a faster ride" and features a GIF of puppies crowded in a dog bed, all rushing to get out at once.

"Working with our advertising contractor, we are pleased to roll out these unique public service messages that address frequent comments from our customers," Steve Poflak, interim MBTA general manager, said in a statement.

DAs insignificant, courts broken, Mass. voters say in new poll

Voters also feel helpless as to how to reform the system, the ACLU poll indicated. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Less than half of Massachusetts voters think that the criminal justice system is working, with voters across racial and ideological lines believing that the system works differently for different people, according to a new poll by the ACLU of Massachusetts.

Voters also feel helpless as to how to reform the system, said Chris Anderson, president of Anderson Robbins Research (which conducted the poll), because they don't know where to start making changes.

Voters are often confused about who holds the power within the criminal justice system, the poll found. Half of those surveyed believed that individual district attorneys have a minor or insignificant impact on the system, even though DAs make decisions like whether to prosecute an offender and whether to recommend a sentence of rehab versus jail time.

Mass. voters believe the criminal justice system is biased, and they aren't sure who holds the power within that system, an ACLU poll found. ISTOCK

Nearly four in 10 voters do not know that DAs are elected.

These findings will inform a new voter education campaign by the ACLU called "What a Difference a DA Makes," which will launch this fall, said Carol Rose, executive director of the ACLU of Massachusetts.

"Massachusetts voters don't yet know the extent to which district attorneys play a role in determining the fate of a lot of people's lives," she said. "People don't realize the only check and balance of DAs are in the voting booth."

The poll surveyed 618 voters statewide and included two focus groups to further discuss the voters' opinions.

More than 90 percent of those surveyed said they view a reputation for honesty and "doing what is right" as a more important quality in a DA than experience as a prosecutor.

"We saw something of an awakening in voters when learning more about DAs," Anderson said. "Nearly every voter left saying they would pay more attention to DA elections in the future now that they have this information."

The ACLU said they are not calling out any specific DAs in the commonwealth but did note that many DAs have run uncontested in recent years. DA elections occur every four years.

How to see the world

A circumnavigation cruise will reward you with a more in-depth picture of a country — or even a whole continent.

Fodor's Travel

Japan's northernmost island

Plan ahead for Zegrahm's May 2018 departure of Hokkaido, "Japan's Wild Island." This 16-day voyage circumnavigates Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido. You'll visit some of the most beautiful parts of the country, like the wildflower fields of Rebun Island. In between nature explorations you'll visit a few morning markets, like the ones at Abashiri and Hakodate, and you'll explore bustling cities like Otaru and Sapporo.

A new option in the Caribbean

Save the date in April 2018 for a full circumnavigation of Cuba aboard the Hebridean Sky with adventure outfitter, Zegrahm Expeditions. This round trip out of Havana introduces you to Cuban culture, historic sites, traditional Cuban cuisine, indigenous music and more. With nearly a dozen port calls around the island, you'll have the opportunity to explore the coastal regions as well as travel inland to discover places like Pinar del Rio, where Cuba's famous tobacco grows, plus Viñales Valley, a UNESCO World Heritage Site known for its dramatic karst outcroppings that punctuate the landscape.

Our neighbors to the north

Sailing around Newfoundland, Adventure Canada promises a voyage where you'll spy whales breaching, seabirds breeding, and maybe even majestic icebergs. You'll travel with onboard naturalists who will share their deep knowledge of the region with you. You'll visit the only Mi'kmaq village in Newfoundland and view a reconstructed Viking settlement (and UNESCO World Heritage Site) that dates to 1000 AD, at L'Anse aux Meadows. Passengers will explore Gros Morne National Park and see the most remote areas of Newfoundland and Labrador in resplendent bloom.

Lava fields and glacier rivers

Circumnavigating Iceland is a relatively new itinerary for many cruise lines. Itineraries are generally 10 or more nights, take place during the summer months, and start and end in the capital city of Reykjavik. Located just shy of the Arctic Circle, expect wildlife sightings like razorbills, puffins, Arctic terns, fulmars and Icelandic horses. Most lines offer an excursion to the famed Blue Lagoon thermal baths but the crystalline blue icebergs you'll witness during Zodiac excursions may be even more breathtaking.

Tour Down Under

If you're going to travel all the way to Australia — Sydney is a 17-hour plane ride from the U.S. — you should consider seeing as much of the country as you can. That's where Australian circumnavigation cruises come in. In one fell swoop, you'll spend a month exploring the entire coastal regions as well as enjoying a fair number of sea days.

The Land of the Long White Cloud

Spend 19 nights, including Christmas and the New Year, circumnavigating New Zealand aboard Noble Caledonia's 57-suite Caledonia Sky. The cruise fare includes all meals and beverages onboard (including wine and beer), shore excursions, gratuities, and even overnight accommodations pre-cruise in Hong Kong and Auckland. This tour has a bit of everything, from metropolitan cities to historic villages to botanical gardens to geothermal hot springs and mud pools.

Rule Britannia

Lindblad's 19-day British & Irish Isles expedition features a circumnavigation of England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales. It's packed with visits to places that highlight the region's long history, from a Stone Age village with ruins dating back 5,000 years ago to destinations that were pivotal in World War II to modern cities as well as quaint little villages where you can grab a pint and listen to traditional music while getting to know the locals.

The wonders of Patagonia

South America is massive so you won't find a full circumnavigation, but there are plenty of voyages that sail partially around the continent and even make calls in Ushuaia for Antarctica. Look to Holland America for the widest range of sailings. There are plenty of 20- to 30-day options but the most encompassing itinerary may be the 42-day South America Odyssey aboard MS Zaandam in February 2018. It departs from Buenos Aires, Argentina, and then sails around the continent and transits the Panama Canal before ending in Florida.

Djupalónssandur Beach is a slice of desolate beauty on the coast of Iceland. BEN BRAIN, DIGITAL CAMERA MAGAZINE

Stop bitching, the Red Sox are right where they should be

World Series or bust for Sox

Vegas likes the Red Sox to at least make it to the American League Championship Series this fall as Boston has 8-1 odds to win the World Series, according to SportsBettingDime.com.

Those odds are the third best in MLB as the Dodgers have 6-1 odds and the Astros have 13-2 odds.

The Red Sox' odds have actually improved since the start of the season as they had 10/1 odds of winning it all at the start of the 2017 season. — Matt Burke

Carson Smith and Tyler Thornburg to get healthy. But wouldn't all of that make the Red Sox' first-place status all the more impressive? It should.

Instead, there's always something. Either it's the "need" for a new third baseman, Hanley Ramirez's work ethic, Price vs the media, or second-guessing how the manager uses Kimbrel. And I'm sure I'm missing a complaint or two. But there always seems to be one, no matter how good things are going or end up being.

Yeah, a power-hitting third baseman would be nice. A batting average higher than .261 for Ramirez would be great. It would be awesome if Price could ignore media criticism. And John Farrell isn't a perfect manager. But something has to be said for a 50-win first-place team at the All-Star break that now has the opportunity to add a piece or two at the July 31 trade deadline and get even better.

What the Red Sox have been able to do thus far, given all their issues this season, is pretty damn impressive.

It's time we stop complaining about it.

@dannypicard

place to be, if you're Boston. Yet, I'm still hearing some complaints.

Comes with the territory, I guess. At the risk of sounding spoiled, we expect the Red Sox to make the playoffs every year. And not just get there, but win when they do.

Last year, they won the division and then got swept by the Cleveland Indians in the ALDS. With the addition of Sale, the expectations this year are, at the very least, to win a playoff series and advance to the ALCS.

If the postseason began today, the Red Sox would play the Indians once again in the ALDS. Sale's dominance would certainly give that series a different feel this time around. And if they could pull that off, it would set them up with an ALCS series against either the Astros, Yankees, Rays, or Twins.

Point is, we can play the "if the playoffs began today" game because the Red Sox are right in the middle of it all. That's a great place to be in mid-July. And while we expect them to be in this position, when they actually have success, as a 50-win team, it's time to stop making it sound like they're just barely staying alive.

Sure, a lot of things have gone wrong this year. Some were expected, like the loss of David Ortiz. Others were not, like missing David Price for the first two months of the season, seeing reigning Cy Young winner Rick Porcello struggle the way he has, and continuing to wait for relievers

The Boston Red Sox are in first place at the All-Star break. So maybe we should stop complaining about it.

Everywhere I turn, somebody here in Boston is unhappy with something that's happening with the Red Sox. Sometimes you'd have no idea they're the first-place team in the AL East with the second-most wins in the American League.

My advice? Enjoy it. Their ace, Chris Sale, got the start in Tuesday night's All-Star Game in Miami, which also featured Mookie Betts and Craig Kimbrel. The Sox return from the break this weekend with a four-game series against the second-place New York Yankees at Fenway. The Yankees entered the break tied with the Tampa Bay Rays for second place in the division, 3.5 games behind the Red Sox.

First place is not a bad

Sox, Yanks bringing the star power

MLB will be counting on its best rivalry to bring the drama this weekend. MATT BURKE

Chris Sale is scheduled to start against the Yankees at Fenway Park on Saturday. GETTY IMAGES

Much was made this past week about the decline of general interest in baseball. The slow pace of the game is one issue, another issue is that the sport just doesn't have any recognizable stars anymore. In May, ESPN put out a piece on the top 100 most famous athletes in the world and not a single current MLB player made the cut.

MLB execs surely hope that changes in the coming years, and if it does change it will likely be due to key members of the No. 1 rivalry in North American sports — the Red Sox and Yankees.

The Sox and Yanks will renew their rivalry this weekend at Fenway in a four-game series that could make or break each team's second half.

Saturday Sale

Chicago is a big market for sure, but Sale's star has never shined like it did this week in Miami when he was the American League starter in the MLB All-Star game as a member of one of the premier franchises in all of baseball in the Red Sox.

Sale did not allow a run to the National League's best in two innings of work Tuesday night. He allowed three hits and struck out two batters on 28 pitches.

Sale is slated to start for the Red Sox on Saturday (4:05 p.m., FS1) in what will be the biggest game he's played in a Boston uniform since opening day. The lanky lefty has faced the Yankees once so far this season and he turned in a very strong effort despite a Sox loss. Sale went eight innings on April 27, giving up two earned runs on eight hits while striking out 10 Yankees batters. Sale received literally zero run support as the Sox lost, 3-0.

All Rise!

Yankees fans have been insufferable with the Aaron Judge puns this season. The Yankee Stadium "bleacher creatures" dress in old-timey wigs with judge's robes and hold up signs like, "All Rise!" whenever the newest Yankee hero comes to the plate.

As tough as it is to take for Red Sox fans, however, the attention is well-deserved. Judge leads the entire Major Leagues in home runs with 30 on the year. The presumed rookie of the year also has 66 RBIs on the season, good for second in MLB behind Seattle's Nelson Cruz.

Judge is the new face of the Yankees, if not the face of baseball, so Boston fans now have a new villain to boo.

It's Mookie time

It would be nice if some "Mook-ie's Bet-ter!" chants broke out this weekend at Fenway when Judge is at the plate (ala the old "Nomar's better" days).

"He might be the best defensive right fielder in the game."

John Farrell,
on Mookie Betts

but this new rivalry is in its infancy. It will come with time.

Truth be told, Betts hasn't been nearly as good as Judge this season.

He's been good, but he's not really in the MVP conversation right now. With a .272 batting average, 16 home runs and 53 RBIs at the break, Sox fans should be counting on a monster second half from the right fielder. He's shown signs that he's ready to go on a tear recently as he belted two home runs and had eight RBIs total in

Toronto on

July 2. Against the Rays in the final game of the first half, he smashed another home run as well.

The time is now

The Red Sox have an opportunity to bury the Yankees this weekend. New York sits 3.5 games behind Boston in the AL East standings and a four-game sweep would likely do the trick. It'll be easier said than done, of course, especially considering the Sox are just 1-4 against the Bronx Bombers so far this season.

The Sox will have Drew Pomeranz (9-4, 3.60 ERA) throwing on Friday night, Sale (11-4, 2.75 ERA) going on Saturday afternoon, Rick Porcello (4-11, 4.75 ERA) going in Game 1 of the Sunday double-header and David Price (4-2, 3.91 ERA) toeing the rubber in the nationally televised Sunday night game.

Aries Someone is likely to use deceptive tactics to get you to agree to changes that will affect your status or home life. Use your intelligence and do your own thing.

Taurus Compromise will be necessary in partnership matters. If you strive for equality, it will help you maintain a good working relationship that allows you both to prosper.

Gemini Be careful whom you trust with personal information. Keep your passwords and possessions in a safe place. Use your charm to outwit anyone trying to cross you.

Cancer Try something different. Let your imagination wander and explore new possibilities. Go on a retreat or an adventure and see where it leads. Embrace new beginnings.

Leo Keep your personal information, passwords and plans a secret. The less obvious you are, the easier it will be to get things done your way.

Virgo Emotional deception is present, along with ulterior motives. You'll have trouble fitting in to unfamiliar situations. Step up and take charge.

Libra Keep your business and personal associates separate. Your intentions may be good, but don't get caught off guard or in the crossfire of an unstable situation.

Scorpio Avoid money problems by smartly handling your investments and overhead costs. Gain experience before you engage in costly endeavors.

Sagittarius Question anyone offering you something and asking for nothing in return. Opt to play it safe and only take what you are willing to give back.

Capricorn Someone who is unlike the people you usually associate with will capture your interest and inspire you to consider new options.

Aquarius Refuse to let anyone limit what you can do. Speak up and show discipline and the ability to get things done, regardless of what others do or say.

Pisces Self-deception will get you into trouble. Realistically look at whatever situation you find yourself in. Physical alterations will not turn out the way you expect or want.
